DORNBLASER FIELD

Colorado Aggies and Montana Grizzlies are meeting for the first time tonight. By way of introduction of our visitors, and a bit about Montana for their information, here are the family backgrounds. . . .

Colorado A & M College is located in Fort Collins, about midway between Denver, Colo., and Cheyenne, Wyo. Back in 1870, the Council and House of Representatives of Colorado Territory passed an act establishing "The Agricultural College of Colorado." In 1876 when Colorado adopted a state constitution, the college became a state institution. Classes began Feb. 16, 1879. First graduation exercises were held in 1884.

Montana State University was chartered Feb. 17, 1893, by the Third Montana Legislature. It opened for classes Sept. 10, 1895, with an enrollment of 50. Its first graduating class in 1898 consisted of two students.

The campus of Colorado A & M covers the major portion of 160 acres a half-mile south of the main business section of Fort Collins. The college maintains an experimental farm of 152 acres a half-mile east of the campus, which furnishes a field laboratory for experimental work in improvement of Colorado field crops. Two miles west of the campus, the college has 1,470 acres of pasture land. Fort Collins itself has a population of more than 12,000.

Montana State University, about a mile from the center of Missoula and midway in the southside residential district, has a campus of 100 acres, plus 520 acres extending to the 2,000-foot summit of Mt. Sentinel behind Dornblaser field. (MSU frequently is referred to as the "University with a mountain on its campus.") The university has a 160-acre biological station on Flathead lake and has 20,000 acres of experimental forest and range land about 40 miles to the north and east.

Colorado A & M College expects an enrollment of 2,600 students this fall, while MSU is seeking to house some 3,600.

That's the family background. Now, briefly, for the grid ground.

Colorado A & M, in 52 years of football, has won 142 games, lost 131 and tied 23, a percentage of .520. Aggie points total 4,055 and their opponents 3,538. Colorado A & M is a member of the Mountain States Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, popularly known as the "Big Seven."

That's the story — now for the game. . . .

A & M Aggies -vs.- Grizzlies

By KEN MURPHY

Expected early-fall kinks were being ironed out by A & M's coaching staff as the 1946 squad finished workouts for the Missoula game. The original list of 180 men has been sliced to approximately 50.

As anticipated, ex-lettermen and squad members of pre-war days have come to the fore as practice sessions rolled on. Paced by these—Bob Hopper and Chuck Painter, backs, and Steffen, Warnock, and Zember in the line—the remaining comparatively inexperienced aspirants have been battling hard for starting assignments.

Bringing a satisfied gleam to the eye of Head Coach Julius "Hans" Wagner is this boy Painter, 190-pound fullback and best ball-lugger among backfield candidates. Chuck has lost none of his pre-war ghost-like running form and natural ability to spot holes in the opposing line.

On the other hand, Bob Hopper, holdover halfback from '41-'42 seasons, is being harried at this early date by leg charley-horses. However, he may be expected to start at a halfback slot against Montana. The other two positions in the backfield are question marks, with Les Szunyog, 170-pound Avella, Pa., boy, and Bob Hainlen, strong-arm passer from last fall's team contending for the quarterback spot. Also showing up strongly here is Dan Luddington, 200-pound freshman from Golden, Colo. The other halfback will undoubtedly be either Floyd Thompson, sophomore returnee from the '45 aggregation, or Cecil Knox, 21-year-old frosh from Denver.

From tackle to tackle, the A & M line should hold its own against anything on its schedule this fall! Orville Steffen and Duane Warnock, both 200-plus tackles and veteran lettermen, should deal the opposition plenty of misery. The former will be a contender for All-Conference honors.

Guards and centers are plentiful. Probably the outstanding guards are pre-war letterman George Zember, 225, and "Toughy" Mullison, the mighty mite at 170 pounds, at left and right guards, respectively. At the pivot post, Harold Kravig is the leading contender since veteran Bill Six was ruled ineligible at the last minute because of failure to complete the spring quarter of academic work.

Prospects at the wings may be sized up as fair, or better-than-average. Wagner has probably the rangiest ends showing on the Aggie gridiron for quite some time. They are all carrying plenty of weight and height but lacking in the experience line. Currently, the best appear to be Jim Abshire, 200-pound, 6-foot 2-inch freshman at left end, and Al Riegel, another frosh scaling also 6-foot 2-inch and weighing 205.

By DON WESTON

Armed with the greatest reservoir of linemen and backs in Montana's history, Coach Doug Fessenden tonight sends his first post-war Grizzly squad into action, one of the fastest combinations he has ever drilled.

Fast backs like Roy Malcolm, Loren Palmer, Jack O'Loughlin, "Bull" Wardien, Dave Streit, Ronnie Keim, and Wally Stephens, whom Montana fans remember for their high school records in recent years, are proving to be outstanding material.

The Grizzlies have a good stock of passers. All of the quarterback prospects, Roberts, Holding, Jerman and Andrus, have shown good pitching arms, and two of the halfbacks, Jack O'Loughlin and Johnny Reagan are outstanding.

Montana won't be the beefiest squad in the Coast Conference this fall, but should stack up well with teams on its schedule. The Grizzly line averages 200 pounds, the backfield 180.

The line is three deep in every position, including the vital end spots. At right end, Dan Yovetich, Fred Semansky and Gus Nash have shown well, especially on offense. At left end, Bill Reynolds, Johnny Kovacich and Johnny Cheek look good on pass snagging and have improved greatly on defense.

Mike Kumpuris, Al Lodell and Bob Normand are all good defensive players at left tackle. At right tackle, Lee Cork has looked good both on offense and defense. Bob Anderson and Frank Briney also have been making good showings in practice scrimmages.

The Grizzlies have power at guards, with five sets of men of virtually equal ability: Thiebes and Rossmiller, Gerner and J. Walterskirchen, Pattison and Svingen, Scott, Cote, Wulle and Llewellyn. Don Leaphart, Sam Leeper, and Al Lamb have been alternating at center.

This is the first season at Montana for Coach Fessenden since 1941, when his Grizzlies won 6 of 9 tough games. In 1942 he entered the army, where he served as a physical education director. In 1945 he coached the Fort Worth Skyasters to a national service championship.

Since he came to Montana in 1935, Doug's teams have won 32, lost 25 and tied four, a percentage of .560. His best year was 1937, when the Grizzlies won 7 of 8 games and were invited to the Sun Bowl (the team, however, decided against playing the post-season game.)

Football was abandoned at the university during 1943 and 44, and resumed last fall on an abbreviated basis.

Montana Coaches

Douglas A. "Doug" Fessenden, director of athletics and head coach at Montana State University, is a 1927 graduate of the University of Illinois. Doug came to Montana in 1935 after highly successful coaching records at high schools in Texas and Chicago. He returned to MSU last January after three years' service in the Army. His top Montana team, the 1937 Grizzlies, won seven of eight.

CHINSKE

DAHLBERG

Edward "Eddie" Chinske, MSU graduate in 1930, joined the Grizzly coaching staff last July as backfield and assistant basketball coach and varsity baseball coach after 16 years as one of the state's leading high school coaches. (His Missoula Spartans swept every state championship last year.) While at MSU, Chinske played two years of varsity baseball, three years of basketball, and three years of football, captaining the 1928 team.

Paul Szakash, ex-Grizzly player, assistant football and baseball coach, joined the MSU coaching staff this fall. One of Montana's all-time fullbacks, Paul plowed up opponent's lines in 1935 and 1937, acting as Montana's ironman in '35, when he played every minute of every game, and as backfield mate with Milt Popovich on the great Montana team of 1937.

George P. "Jiggs" Dahlberg, line coach and head basketball coach, Montana '25, played three years at end for the Grizzlies and handled a forward spot in basketball. After high school coaching in Montana and Washington, Jiggs returned to MSU in 1936. First of the coaching staff to return from military service, Jiggs laid the groundwork for 1946 with his '45 gridders.

Naseby "Nase" Rinehart, Montana '25, has been trainer for Grizzly teams for many years. A highly capable football man himself, Nase won three varsity letters at end for the Grizzlies.

Dan Sullivan as senior manager for the Grizzlies is the man who takes care of the countless details that are a part of anybody's grid season.

CHENEY SAVAGES

—vs.—

MONTANA STATE UNIVERSITY

Next Saturday at 8:15 p.m. under the lights of Dornblaser Field, the Cheney Savages from Eastern Washington College of Education will attempt to scalp a Montana Grizzly. So far this season, Cheney Coach "Red" Reese has had little to say on the visitors' power, but, like all schools that scraped the barrel regularly in prewar days for reserve strength, Cheney this year has material capable of big-time play. Montana will have to be ready for a potentially powerful opponent. Reese probably will make use of 240-pound Dick Sartain at end, Bill Nye, 190-pound sophomore from Spokane, and several men with varsity experience on big college teams now back with Cheney. Anything can happen this year, and Cheney won't be coming to Missoula for the ride!

The All-American Drink

There's no better kick-off to a good time than a frosty bottle of Coca-Cola. When there's life and tingle in the air, remember there's life and tingle in ice-cold Coke—to refresh you and keep you on your toes.

Coke and good sport just simply go together. That's why, in stadiums across the land, the pause that refreshes with ice-cold Coca-Cola is part of the game—the friendly, sociable part—the part you play. Enjoy it.
